Apple lit the mobile industry on fire two days ago with the official announcement of the new iPhone and long-rumored wearable product, the Apple Watch. No doubt, there was a surplus of notable events at key lengths, and among these was probably the compelling wallpaper that graced the iPhone flagship behind Tim Cook on stage at the Flint Center. We're talking about blossoming purple flowers. Well, this wallpaper will build entrée alongside iOS 8 on September 17th, but as usual, it won't come alone. There will be a number of new wallpapers on its side, and while these are now available are the newly released Golden Master version of iOS 8, it's a while before iFans can regularly treat itself to some new wallpapers. Luckily the graphic designer behind the wallpaper, Jason Zigrino, has made the iOS 8 wallpaper collection ahead of the official available Rolot. The desired wallpapers have been extracted directly from the Golden Master os. Feel free to check them out just below. If the wallpapers below resemble your cup of tea, you can download the ones with the top res from here. Source: @JasonZigrino via our iDownloadBlog newsletter subscriber!
